Chapter 1 by Fractaly

Purple hay. It's impossible, right? For the Cedric family it's possible though. The Cedric family would say a month ago that purple hay was impossible, But they just changed their mind very recently.

One week ago, The Cedric Family received their monthly supply of hay for their horses. The youngest of the family, Eric, was the only one suspicious about the hay.

Despite being a 5-year old, Eric was the one who spends the most time in the barn. So he knows all the characteristics of hay.

"These bales of hay don't have the normal characteristics of hay," Eric thought.

However, the rest of the family just accepted that the hay was normal and just took the hay bales next to the part of the barn where the horses were.

That evening, the three Cedric children Duncan, Gabby, and Eric were taking out some hay for the horses for their dinner. Eric was still worried that the hay might infect the animals or the family. He told his family about the hay problem, but none of them listened. Since it was a chore, Eric had to feed the horses no matter what.

blue.

When their vision cleared, they were in a hallway and everything was white.

"Where are we?" Duncan asked.

"You are in the Space Hallway Station," a robotic voice said.

Gabby then looked out the window on their left to see that she was looking at Earth from outer space.

"Excuse me, super helpful passerby-ex-machina?"

"Not quite my name. Deus ex Machina."

"Could you return us to our farm please?"

"Ahh no. It's on the other side now. Wait twelve - hundred, will you?"

"Twelve hundred nanoseconds?"

"Children." The machine shook his head. "Twelve hours on Earth. A typical night."

"Why'd you take us anyway?"

"I was waiting for that. Come with me."

They were lead into an empty room by the machine.

"Plug me in, will you. My code is एक दिन."

"Ēka dina?"

"Yes."

"I can't understand these symbols on the code pad, Deus."

"I'll put it on something. Got something you don't care about?"

"No."

"Fine. I'll do it."

"ए. क. Open character. दि. न."

The room came to life.

"Code accepted. Hello, Deus ex Machina."

"Open program अन्ति"

"Initiating program अन्ति"

"Your planet is in trouble."

There was a gasp of amazement as stars and their stellar systems passed through them.

Duncan tried to catch one labeled "नतवमला."

"See that rock?"

They saw Earth, and something else. Deus pointed to the something else.

Gabby pointed at it too. "What is that?"

"The माफ नदिइएको. It translates in your language to the Unforgiven. An unstoppable race of pseudopeople who enjoy destroying planets. There's only one thing stopping them right now. They don't like to harm intelligent life, claiming that they will destroy the physical, but all cultures must be preserved."

"So they're giving you time to evacuate us."

"Agreed. We won't be able to store everyone on one ship, though, so we brought multiple. We also are letting them decide two cities to preserve."

"How long will this take?"

"Given our current rate, longer than we have. We are running out of time, and only twenty percent of Earth is saved. How do we get them all aboard something they'd otherwise shoot down?"
